UGRA Honors Hill Country Master Gardeners

At the September 26th meeting, the Board of Directors of the Upper Guadalupe River Authority (UGRA) honored the selfless service of the Hill Country Master Gardeners in assisting with the creation of the UGRA EduScape. The Board unanimously approved a resolution expressing recognition and appreciation to the Hill Country Master Gardeners and presented members Debra Foley and Jackie Skinner with a certificate of appreciation.

The UGRA EduScape is an educational landscape that wraps around the Guadalupe Basin Natural Resources Center at 125 Lehman Drive in Kerrville. Visitors can stroll along the landscape path to view numerous examples of practices that conserve water and protect the Guadalupe River through stormwater management. Visitors will be guided by information on interpretive signs to enhance understanding of the landscape elements.

“We deeply appreciate the invaluable assistance provided by the Master Gardeners. They provided the initial design for the EduScape, gave us input on re-landscaping decisions, and shared their expertise on plant choices. This has been a long-term project and their steadfast support helped us make the EduScape a reality,” said UGRA Board Director and Outreach & Education Committee Chair Diane McMahon.
